Proceedings of the Third European Conference on Design 4 Health, 13 - 16 July 2015, Sheffield, UK

Foreword

It gives me great pleasure to welcome you to the Proceedings of the Third European Design4Health Conference at Sheffield Hallam University. The last six years have seen a growing recognition of the role that design and creative practice play in the development of products, interventions and services in the sphere of health and healthcare.

There is much evidence in these proceedings of how health and design are working together in the creation of health promoting and enabling environments, in increasing quality of life in individuals living with long term conditions and the potential of creative practice in knowledge mobilisation.

It is good to see a more critical, on-going discourse relating to the diverse paradigms which health and design inhabit and in the challenges relating to how we communicate what we do: to method and measurement. This conference continues to offer a forum for these discussions, exploring ways of how as a community we may move forward in new and exciting directions. We welcome you.

Dr Claire Craig
Lab4Living Health Director

Sponsors

We are grateful to our headline sponsor for their generous support.

Yorkshire & Humber AHSN (YHAHSN) is part of a 'network of networks' and one of 15 Academic Health Science Networks (AHSNs) given licence to operate by NHS England in May 2013. The YHAHSN was established to create and harness strong, purposeful partnerships between patients, health services, industry, and academia in order to create significant improvements in the health of the population by reducing service variability and improving patient experience in the health care system; to collaborate to ensure new innovative products and services that have the potential to transform lives become part of routine clinical practice; and to stimulate regional economic growth through inward investment opportunities and industry engagement.
